

Crowded Junior Village Moves Outdoors

Tent Life—A Thrilling Expedient

By Eve Edstrom
Staff Reporter

As far as the Braves, the Beavers and the Bears are concerned, there is no life like tent life on Junior Village grounds.

"It's just like going to camp," said 11-year-old Robert.

"It's cooler here than being in those hot, old cottages," said 10-year-old Clark ~~McLellan~~ John.

"We've got real cold water here, water like refrigerator water," said 11-year-old John.

"And we're closer to the green apples," said 9-year-old Donald whose pockets were bulging with the foraged fruit.

"You had better throw those away or you'll get a stomach ache," said Joseph Kosisky, superintendent of Junior Village.

The Village at Blue Plains is the District's home for homeless children. Their numbers have grown so large—as many as 540 have been crammed into space for 240—that District officials resorted to a temporary expedient, tents, to house them safely.

Chosen for the tent life were three groups of 8 to 12-year-olds, known as the Braves, Beavers and Bears, who would have been selected to go to camp if any facilities had been available for them.

With their meager belongings packed in pillow slips over their shoulders, the youngsters made the move from their crowded cottages yesterday.

"We've got so much room here," said one Bear as he surveyed his tent.

Actually, the tents also are crowded but the beds don't touch one another as they appear to do in the cottages.

Seventy boys at Junior Village, Blue Plains, troop into their new tent homes. Village cottages were overcrowded.

Two tents accommodate 24 youngsters each while three smaller ones house eight each. In the camping community, there also is a supply tent, a tent for showers and wash basins, and a tent which serves as "command post" for counselors who are on duty around the clock.

However, the "best thing" about the camp, as far as the children are concerned, is the tent which contains refrigerated water coolers. These originally were purchased to place in the cottages which now have water fountains.

"But the counselors won't be sleeping in our tent and we can have more fun at night," said 11-year-old Tyrone.

However, the "best thing" about the camp, as far as the children are concerned, is the tent which contains refrigerated water coolers. These originally were purchased to place in the cottages which now have water fountains.

The 9-year-old stood by and as he began to throw away his green apples, he said:

"It's fun here but it would be more fun if I had toys, cowboy gun toys, to play with."

Four of the boys sit atop their bunks awaiting the arrival of their mattresses. The tents are a temporary measure.

BOY SCOUTS FACE WORLD PROBLEMS

The newspaper

Lack Funds and Staff to Aid
Units in New Nations

Jones

By TANIA LONG

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Nov. 1—The Boy Scouts world movement is having its troubles, like the rest of the world. P. 17

The troubles are the result, in fact, of world problems and more especially of the evolution the world is undergoing.

As the world map keeps changing with the emergence of new nations, particularly in Africa and Asia, the difficulties and challenges facing the Boy Scouts World Bureau in Ottawa are becoming "more and more momentous," according to Maj. Gen. Dan C. Spry (Ret.), director of the bureau.

There is not enough money to go around. There is a shortage of personnel to meet the new demands for assistance. Political upheavals complicate matters even more.

Earlier this year, for example, the Inter-American Office of the Boy Scouts organization was forced to move its headquarters from Havana to Mexico City. Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba has refused to recognize the Boy Scouts as an international organization and interference and obstruction by Cuban officials made further operations in Havana impossible.

There are now 9,000,000 Boy Scouts and Scout leaders in the world organization—half of them in the United States. This represents an increase of more than 500,000 since 1958.

During the last two years, units in eight new countries have joined the organization and sixty-six nations are represented in the movement. The latest to be accepted was Morocco in September.

The Boy Scout movement is regarded by its leaders as a bulwark against communism and a means of spreading hygiene and other benefits of civilization among backward countries.

In the Congo, for example, Scouts were taught how to add handles to empty food cans so that their families no longer burned their hands holding handleless cans filled with hot food.

Another African unit was taught to make toothbrushes by shaving the end of a stick into located $50,000 a year to get its Boy Scout units on their feet. But the World Bureau lacks these funds and has been unable to raise them despite appeals to wealthy foundations throughout the world.

The bureau is receiving applications from newly independent countries where in many cases there was no Boy Scout organization to speak of. This presents another problem.

Before there can be a Boy Scout unit acceptable to the world organization, a cadre of leaders must be trained and a certain basic standard achieved. This means sending out Scouting specialists to train potential leaders in everything from holding a meeting to teaching Scouts to tie knots. Or it means bringing potential Scout leaders to the United States or Canada for training.

All too frequently, when potential leaders return to their native lands they end up in government jobs or industry, to the neglect of the Boy Scouts, as a result of their training abroad.

United Nations

GOOD DEEDS IN THE CONGO: Boy Scouts aid Red Cross in distributing milk at New Village, Leopoldville, Congo. Scouting officials have told of limited funds.

imitation bristles and to use the adequate help to Boy Scouts in brushes twice daily.

In Tunisia, during the recent fighting with French forces over Bizerte, the Scouts played a notable part in looking after the orphaned or lost children. They evacuated the children from the fighting zones and found shelter for them until the authorities were able to take over. In the Congo, Boy Scouts have helped the Red Cross distribute food to the children of Leopoldville.

The World Bureau does not Africa alone, according to General Spry, should be al-newly independent nations and many of the units in the new countries are unable to raise the money themselves.

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization makes certain grants on the ground that

Scouting is educational and the Asia Foundation in San Francisco has made funds available for use in Asia. But the demands for aid far exceed the funds available.
